(Copyright, 1896.)
William McKinley, Jr., third son of the family, was born in Niles, Trumbull county, O., January 29, 1843. His father, William McKinley, was an iron manufacturer, having removed from Pennsylvania to Ohio with his family to introduce certain iron interests in Ohio. David McKinley, brother of William, is a resident of San Francisco, and Abner is a business man.

At the age of seventeen young McKinley removed to Poland for educational advantages, and there taught a country school, soon giving it up to go to Allegheny College, but left to enlist as private in the Poland Guards at the breaking out of the civil war. He served afterward on the staff of Brigadier General Rutherford B. Hayes, also on the staff of Gen. Crook, the Indian fighter. He stands about 5 feet 7 inches and weighs 175 pounds.

After the war he went into law practice in Canton, O., where he still lives. He is an attendant at the First Methodist Church. His political career began at the age of thirty-three, when he was elected to Congress. He served continuously until 1890. Was first elected Governor of Ohio in 1892. McKinley married in January, 1871, Miss Saxton, of Canton, daughter of an influential citizen. Two girls died in infancy. The eldest, born in 1871, lived three years. Since the birth and death of the second Mrs. McKinley has been a wheel-chair invalid. She is, however, her husband's constant companion in Ohio and Washington. McKinley's mother, Nancy McKinley, is living, aged eighty-seven. His father died two years ago. Then McKinley dropped the "Jr." title.

McKinley's paternal grandfather, David McKinley, came to America at the age of twelve. He fought in the revolution and was pensioned by the government. On the maternal side, far back, he is of Scotch-Irish parentage, and on his father's side of Scotch-Irish.
